

A laryngeal mask has a tube and mount integrally molded from polyurethane as a single piece. A sealing cuff is attached to the mount separately. An inflation line extends in a groove along the outside of the tube and opens at one end into the cuff so that it can be inflated and deflated.